Synopsis

Architecture in Europe has always been characterized by an inimitable variety of style. Also current architecture, from Estonia to Spain, between Norway, Germany and Greece is inspired by the creative interaction of international design trends with the unparalleled and individual architectural language unique for each country â “ for private homes and office complexes, religious and cultural buildings, or sports facilities and airports.The building technology of today is also marked by an exciting heterogeneity. Innovations like 3D printing are being applied as well as traditional brick construction, translucent high-tech concrete roofs as well as greened faÃ§ades. The Atlas of European Architecture showcases the exciting esthetical, technical and typological diversity.
